According to Shailendra Bhandare: "Finally, it is worth mentioning that the name 'Musagarh' is actually a pun - as companion to 'Isagarh', or 'Fort of Jesus,' it could be a reference to 'Fort of Moses', but 'Musa' was also the Indian version of the French honorific 'monsieur', so it could equally stand for 'Fort of the Monsieur', an indirect reference to [Jean Baptiste] Filose himself. Perhaps the poetic side of Filose is well brought out by this innovative place name!"

Attribution to Sabalgarh is tentative. See the article by Shailendra Bhandare in JONS, volume 198 (winter 2009). The mint name itself reads either falus or filusa, perhaps a reference to Jean Baptiste Filose, who conquered Sabalgarh for Gwalior in 1810. The meaning of the dates & regnal years is conjectural.
