2014. BRUNEI: Sultan Kamaluddin, 1710-1740, tin pitis (5.28g), SS-3F, animal facing left (perhaps a donkey, as suggested by Singh) // blundered Arabic, sultan clear at the top, then perhaps blundered kamal al-din, bottom line unclear; appears to be from the same mold as illustrated SS-3F, bold VF, RRR $120 - 160

The incorrect city name lacks the "rn" for "burni", with "ni" engraved as the Arabic letter "k", presumably an engraver's error.

The proper weight of this type seems to be in the range of 9g to 12g with an average of about 10.5g. These light pieces are probably local issues, produced with or without official authorization. They seem to be considerably rarer than the full-weight examples.

During the Franklin Mint's search for substitute metals for U.S. silver coinage they struck and distributed a cased three-piece set of dollar-size pieces called "Pattern Trial Proofs." These were designed by former U.S. Mint director Gilroy Roberts and depicted historic Gardiners Island, located near the eastern tip of Long Island, N. Y., and its colony of fishing hawks or ospreys. Settled in 1639, the island remained in the possession of the Gardiner family into modern times. Roberts design featured an dramatic osprey in flight with a captured fish and the Gardiner Arms with the new F/M mintmark and the joined GR monogram of the artist that had first appeared on the Kennedy half dollar.

The Franklin Mint describes these alloys as "NICON, Cupro-nickel with Columbian; STERLING PLUS, 'Nickel-Silver' core sandwiched between two layers of Sterling-Silver (.925 fine); and FRANKLINIUM I, Pure Nickel impregnated with Columbian."
